DIGITAL MARKETING & REVENUE GROWTH PROPOSAL

Hotel Dreams by DV8

Prepared by: Xclusive Marketing Services
Proposed Engagement: Two-Month Initial Marketing Programme
Primary Platforms: Meta (Facebook & Instagram) and X (formerly Twitter)

1. Executive Summary

Hotel Dreams by DV8 has an opportunity to position itself as more than a place to sleep. With its rooms, bar, lounge, dining area, gym, staff, and activities, the hotel can offer guests an experience that encourages them to visit, return, and become part of a community.

Our proposed digital marketing strategy will focus on showcasing that experience, reaching the right audiences, generating qualified enquiries, and building an internal sales process that converts enquiries into paying customers.

The strategy will combine content marketing, paid advertising, customer segmentation, staff training, sales support, and customer relationship management. This approach will ensure that marketing does not end when a potential customer sends a message. Instead, every enquiry becomes an opportunity to understand the customer, meet their needs, and build a lasting relationship.

The initial two-month period will establish the foundation, launch approved campaigns, assess lead quality, and demonstrate the commercial potential of a structured digital marketing system.

2. Our Core Objective

To establish Hotel Dreams by DV8 as a recognisable hospitality brand that attracts quality customers, generates bookings, and builds repeat business through a combination of compelling content, targeted advertising, and effective sales follow-up.

Key objectives

- Brand positioning: Communicate the hotel's atmosphere, service quality, facilities, and unique selling points.
- Lead generation: Attract individuals, groups, corporate clients, and travellers who are likely to book.

- Booking conversion: Create a clear process for responding to enquiries and turning interest into confirmed bookings.
- Customer retention: Build a customer database that supports personalised follow-up, repeat visits, and referrals.
- Internal capacity building: Train relevant staff to support the brand experience, manage enquiries, and maintain customer records.
- Long-term growth: Use the initial campaign period to establish a foundation for a sustainable marketing partnership.

3. Strategic Approach

Our strategy will be built around three interconnected pillars.

Pillar One: Sell the Experience

Customers should be able to picture themselves at Hotel Dreams by DV8 before they arrive.

Rather than relying only on promotional graphics and room photographs, we will use content to showcase the people, atmosphere, facilities, services, and activities that make the hotel worth visiting.

Pillar Two: Turn Attention into Bookings

Content and advertising will direct prospective customers towards clear actions, including making enquiries, booking rooms, reserving spaces, and asking about available offers.

Campaigns will be developed around approved services and offers, with audience targeting based on the needs and booking behaviour of each customer segment.

Pillar Three: Build Relationships That Generate Repeat Business

A successful hotel marketing strategy should not treat every enquiry as an isolated transaction.

We will work with the sales team to establish a process for understanding customer preferences, recording enquiries, following up, and identifying opportunities for repeat bookings and additional services.

The aim is to help Hotel Dreams by DV8 move from simply acquiring customers to building a reliable base of returning guests.

4. Content Marketing Strategy

Content will be developed around individual services, customer needs, everyday hotel activities, and the overall guest experience.

A. Rooms and Accommodation

Target audiences: Business travellers, individuals, couples, returning Nigerians, international visitors, and travellers requiring accommodation before or after a flight.

Content will showcase room quality, comfort, cleanliness, available amenities, and the experience of staying at the hotel.

Proposed content includes:

- Room tours showcasing available room categories and amenities.
- Short videos highlighting comfort, cleanliness, and attention to detail.
- Stay packages for guests who need accommodation before departure or after arriving in the country.
- Advance-booking offers designed to encourage customers to plan ahead.
- Content explaining room options, booking procedures, and relevant services.

B. Dining, Bar and Lounge

Target audiences: Working professionals, social groups, couples, existing hotel guests, and people looking for places to relax or socialise.

The objective is to position these facilities as destinations in their own right, rather than amenities that only overnight guests can use.

Proposed content includes:

- Food and drink highlights.
- Behind-the-scenes content featuring the preparation and service process.
- Lounge atmosphere and customer experience videos.
- Social gatherings, themed evenings, and approved event promotions.
- Offers that encourage guests to combine dining, drinks, and accommodation where appropriate.

C. Gym and Wellness

Target audiences: Fitness-conscious individuals, working professionals, and guests interested in maintaining their routines while travelling.

Content will communicate the gym's facilities, available equipment, atmosphere, and any approved membership or access options.

The objective is to introduce the facility to potential customers who may not initially consider the hotel for its accommodation services.

D. Staff, Service Quality and Hospitality

Target audiences: All prospective guests, with particular emphasis on customers who value reliability, comfort, professionalism, and attentive service.

People do not only pay for a room. They also pay for how they are treated.

Content will help make the hotel's service standards visible through:

- Staff introductions and role-based features.
- Behind-the-scenes daily operations.
- Guest welcome experiences.
- Service demonstrations and attention to detail.
- Short videos showing how the team prepares for guests and special occasions.

This will require internal staff participation and basic guidance on filming, communication, presentation, and brand standards.

E. Community and Everyday Experiences

The hotel will be presented as a place where people can return for different reasons, whether to stay overnight, meet friends, enjoy a meal, use the gym, attend an activity, or spend an evening in the lounge.

Proposed content includes:

- Highlights from everyday activities and approved events.
- Upcoming activities and special experiences.
- Guest experiences and testimonials, with appropriate consent.
- Seasonal occasions and social gatherings.
- Content encouraging customers to return with friends, colleagues, and family.

The central idea is to make the audience feel that Hotel Dreams by DV8 is somewhere they can belong, not simply somewhere they can book.

5. Customer Segmentation and Campaign Strategy

Different customers have different reasons for visiting a hotel. Our marketing campaigns will reflect those differences.

Customer segment	Customer need	Proposed marketing focus
Individual guests	Comfortable accommodation and convenience	Room showcases, stay offers, direct booking enquiries
Travellers	Accommodation before or after a journey	Advance bookings, travel-related stay packages, convenience
Couples and social guests	Relaxation, dining, and leisure	Lounge experiences, dining content, approved packages
Corporate clients	Accommodation and business-related requirements	Corporate offers, direct outreach, business enquiries

Groups and event customers	Social gatherings and shared experiences	Events, group packages, dining and lounge offers
Local leisure customers	Dining, gym access, and social activities	Facility-specific campaigns and activity promotions
Returning guests	Familiarity, convenience, and value	Repeat-visit offers, personalised follow-up, relevant promotions

This segmentation will inform both content development and paid advertising.

Corporate customers may require a different sales process from individual guests. Similarly, someone enquiring about a room for tomorrow should receive a different follow-up approach from someone planning a stay several weeks in advance.

The final segments and campaign priorities will be agreed with management after reviewing the hotel's services, room availability, customer profile, and commercial objectives.

6. Offers and Pricing Strategy

Pricing and incentives will support customer acquisition while protecting the hotel's revenue and positioning.

Rather than relying on blanket discounts, we propose developing structured offers for specific customer segments and booking situations.

Potential offers for management's consideration include:

- Advance-booking rates for customers who reserve ahead.
- First-time guest incentives, such as complimentary room service where operationally and financially viable.
- Corporate accommodation packages for eligible businesses.
- Group booking offers and packages combining selected services.
- Return-guest incentives to encourage repeat visits.
- Special offers linked to approved events, seasons, or low-demand periods.

All offers will be subject to management approval, availability, and agreed commercial terms.

Internal pricing and sales structure

Management and the sales team will establish clear pricing rules, including approved rates, minimum acceptable prices, eligible discounts, and conditions for special offers.

Where appropriate, the hotel can differentiate packages by customer segment, length of stay, booking lead time, volume, or corporate agreement.

This will allow the sales team to respond to different customer needs without inconsistent pricing or unnecessary reductions in revenue.

7. Lead Management and Sales Conversion

Generating enquiries is only one part of the process. The hotel's ability to respond, understand customer needs, and close bookings will determine how much commercial value the campaigns deliver.

We propose establishing a practical lead management process in collaboration with the internal sales team.

A. Enquiry management

Every enquiry received through social media, WhatsApp, telephone, or other agreed channels should be handled through a defined process.

The sales team will be guided to:

- Respond promptly and professionally.
- Establish what the customer needs before recommending an offer.
- Ask relevant questions about dates, room requirements, group size, budget range, and additional services.
- Explain suitable options and the next steps towards booking.
- Record the enquiry and agree on an appropriate follow-up.

B. Customer information and lead records

A simple lead register or suitable CRM system will be used to maintain relevant customer information.

Recommended fields include:

Information	Purpose
Customer name and contact details	Enable appropriate communication
Enquiry date and source	Identify where leads originate
Customer segment	Distinguish individual, corporate, group, and other enquiries
Service of interest	Understand the customer's requirements
Preferred dates and budget range	Recommend suitable options
Enquiry status	Track progress towards booking
Follow-up date and outcome	Reduce missed opportunities
Booking value and outcome	Measure commercial results

Customer preferences and consent	Support relevant future offers

Only information necessary for legitimate business purposes will be collected, with appropriate access controls and privacy safeguards.

C. Relationship-based selling

The sales team will be encouraged to understand the customer beyond the immediate enquiry.

For example, a guest who regularly travels for business may appreciate convenient accommodation and advance-booking options. A customer who frequently visits the lounge may respond better to activity announcements or dining offers.

With appropriate customer consent, this information can inform future communication and relevant offers.

The objective is to make follow-up more useful and personal, without making customers feel pressured or overwhelmed.

D. Follow-up and conversion

A clear follow-up process will be established for enquiries that do not result in an immediate booking.

The process will distinguish between customers who need more information, those comparing prices, those planning future stays, and those who are no longer interested.

The sales team will record the outcome of each enquiry so that marketing performance can be evaluated against actual bookings rather than message volume alone.

8. Paid Advertising Strategy

Paid advertising will be used to reach prospective customers, promote approved offers, and generate enquiries that the sales team can convert.

Meta: Facebook and Instagram

Meta will be the primary advertising channel for visual storytelling and customer acquisition.

Campaigns may include:

- Room and accommodation campaigns.
- Dining, lounge, gym, and leisure promotions.
- Advance-booking and approved promotional offers.
- Retargeting people who have engaged with the hotel's content, where appropriate tracking is available.

- Corporate and group enquiry campaigns.
- Campaigns encouraging customers to enquire through approved messaging or booking channels.

The final campaign objectives and targeting will depend on the services approved for promotion, the hotel's location and customer catchment area, available booking capacity, and the agreed advertising budget.

X: Formerly Twitter

X will support brand visibility, timely communication, and the promotion of selected hotel services and activities.

Content will focus on:

- Hotel updates and upcoming activities.
- Service highlights and approved promotions.
- Relevant conversations and community engagement.
- Corporate visibility and selected business-facing communications.

Paid campaigns on X will be considered where the audience, campaign objective, and expected cost justify the investment. Meta and X will not automatically receive equal budgets, as allocations should reflect their respective performance and commercial value.

Measurement

Campaigns will be assessed using agreed indicators, including:

- Reach and relevant audience engagement.
- Enquiries generated.
- Cost per enquiry.
- Lead quality and customer segment.
- Sales follow-up and booking conversion.
- Confirmed bookings and attributable revenue, where tracking permits.

Advertising spend, projected lead volumes, and detailed performance estimates will be developed after the initial strategy is approved and the necessary business information is available.

9. Two-Month Implementation Plan

Month One: Foundation, Preparation and Training

The first month will focus on establishing the systems required to execute the strategy effectively.

Key activities:

1. Discovery and business assessment
    - Review the hotel's services, room categories, current positioning, and existing marketing activities.
    - Identify priority customer segments and the most commercially viable offerings.
    - Align on business objectives and measures of success.
2. Marketing infrastructure
    - Review or establish the relevant Meta and X advertising accounts.
    - Confirm access permissions, account ownership, billing arrangements, and security.
    - Set up agreed enquiry channels and available tracking tools.
    - Review existing booking pathways and identify conversion gaps.
3. Content planning and preparation
    - Develop the initial content strategy and production schedule.
    - Identify content requirements for rooms, facilities, staff, activities, and offers.
    - Coordinate with hotel management to arrange filming and photography.
    - Prepare initial advertising concepts and messaging.
4. Internal team training
    - Introduce relevant staff to the brand positioning and customer experience standards.
    - Train the sales team on enquiry handling, lead qualification, customer records, and follow-up.
    - Establish a consistent process for escalating booking questions and confirming availability.
    - Agree on responsibilities and response expectations.
5. Offer and pricing alignment
    - Work with management to define approved offers, pricing boundaries, and booking conditions.
    - Confirm which services will be prioritised for the initial campaigns.

Expected outcome: A clear marketing direction, prepared content, functioning campaign infrastructure, approved offers, and a trained internal team ready for campaign activation.

Month Two: Campaign Launch, Lead Generation and Optimisation

The second month will focus on activating the agreed campaigns and assessing their commercial performance.

Key activities:

1. Launch approved Meta campaigns and selected X promotional activities.
2. Publish content according to the agreed schedule.
3. Promote priority services and offers to their relevant audiences.
4. Direct prospective customers to the agreed enquiry or booking channels.
5. Monitor incoming enquiries and assess lead quality.
6. Work with the sales team to review follow-up and conversion outcomes.
7. Adjust content, targeting, and campaign messaging based on performance.

8. Prepare a performance report covering marketing activity, enquiries, sales outcomes where available, and recommendations for the next phase.

Expected outcome: An initial performance baseline, evidence of audience response, a clearer understanding of lead quality, and practical recommendations for scaling the most promising campaigns.

10. Roles and Responsibilities

Successful implementation will require collaboration between the marketing function, hotel management, and the internal sales team.

Marketing function	Hotel management	Sales team
Develop strategy and content direction	Approve services, offers, and pricing	Respond to enquiries
Manage agreed campaigns	Provide access, information, and approvals	Qualify and record leads
Monitor campaign performance	Coordinate staff and facilities for content production	Follow up with prospective customers
Recommend optimisation opportunities	Confirm availability and booking policies	Update booking outcomes
Report marketing results	Review performance and business priorities	Support repeat bookings and customer retention

The hotel will need to nominate an internal point of contact to coordinate approvals, staff participation, booking information, and campaign-related decisions.

11. Performance Evaluation

The initial two-month period will be evaluated against agreed objectives and the data available.

Performance reporting will distinguish between marketing activity, lead generation, and actual commercial outcomes.

The principal measures will include:

- Brand visibility and audience engagement.
- Number of enquiries generated by service and channel.
- Cost per enquiry once advertising begins.
- Percentage of enquiries that meet agreed qualification criteria.
- Sales response and follow-up performance.

- Number of confirmed bookings attributable to campaigns where measurable.
- Booking value and revenue contribution where reliable data is available.
- Customer feedback and opportunities for repeat business.

We will not treat reach, engagement, or message volume alone as proof of business success. The focus will be on understanding how marketing contributes to qualified demand and confirmed bookings.

12. Budget and Lead Forecasting

A detailed advertising budget and lead forecast will be prepared after management approves the initial marketing strategy.

The forecast will take into account:

- Priority room categories and available inventory.
- The services selected for promotion.
- Approved prices, packages, and incentives.
- Target customer segments and relevant locations.
- Historical campaign data, where available.
- Advertising costs and the conversion process.
- The sales team's capacity to manage enquiries.

This will allow us to recommend a realistic budget and establish measurable expectations instead of presenting lead estimates without sufficient supporting information.

Advertising spend will be agreed separately from any marketing management or production fees, with the allocation and payment arrangements documented before campaign activation.

13. Proposed Engagement and Continuation

The first two months will serve as an initial programme to establish the marketing structure, implement the agreed strategy, and evaluate early results.

At the end of the period, both parties will review campaign performance, lead quality, operational readiness, and opportunities for growth.

Based on this review, we propose discussing a full-time or ongoing marketing contract to continue campaign management, content production, lead generation, performance optimisation, and customer retention initiatives.

The objective is to move from the initial implementation phase into a longer-term arrangement supported by clear responsibilities, agreed deliverables, reporting, and commercial targets.

Any ongoing engagement will be subject to a separate agreement covering scope, fees, advertising expenditure, deliverables, and duration.

14. Conclusion

Hotel Dreams by DV8 has the opportunity to build a stronger market position by making its hospitality experience more visible, more appealing, and easier to access.

Our proposed strategy combines the creative side of marketing with the operational processes needed to turn customer interest into revenue.

By showcasing the hotel's rooms, staff, facilities, and everyday experiences, we aim to give prospective guests a compelling reason to visit. By introducing structured offers, targeted advertising, lead management, and relationship-based selling, we aim to help the business turn that interest into bookings and repeat customers.

The two-month programme will establish the foundation, activate the first campaigns, and generate insights that can guide the next stage of growth.

Our goal is not simply to make Hotel Dreams by DV8 more visible online. It is to help the hotel attract the right customers, deliver an experience worth returning for, and build a sales process that turns those relationships into sustainable business growth.

Prepared by Xclusive Marketing Services

Initial strategy proposal. Advertising budget, projected lead volumes, detailed deliverables, and ongoing engagement fees to be agreed following management approval and initial discovery.

What I recommend before you present it

There are four things that will make this pitch stronger when you take it to management.

1. Make the internal sales process a central selling point. Many marketing pitches focus on content and advertising. Your proposal is stronger because it addresses what happens after the customer enquires, which is where bookings can be won or lost.

2. Request a few essential business figures during the discovery phase. These include room categories and rates, occupancy levels where available, average booking value, existing enquiry volume, and the most profitable services. You will need these to build a credible advertising budget and lead forecast.

3. Agree on what the two-month free period includes. Define the content deliverables, staff training, campaign management, reporting, and any exclusions. In particular, clarify whether advertising spend, professional production costs, influencer fees, and other third-party expenses are separate from your services.

4. Set expectations for the full-time contract from the beginning. The goal is to use the two months to demonstrate value, but the continuation should be based on agreed deliverables, measurable progress, and a discussion about the commercial terms before the initial period ends.

One important distinction: because your plan includes training staff, building lead records, and improving sales conversion, I would pitch your role as a digital marketing and customer acquisition partner, not just a social media manager. That better reflects the value of the work you're proposing.
